One of the subjects in which the 2021 outsourcing reform had deepest impact is the workers' profit sharing, as it introduced a new calculation limit, to enter into force starting May 2022.

Below we present a short analysis of the biggest changes to consider in the payment of PTU, different scenarios and the penalties put in place by the reform, as well as considerations for proper compliance.

New limits for profit sharing

It is important to highlight that payment of PTU is both an employer's obligation and a worker's right, supported by the Constitution and the Federal Labor Law. The latter's article 127 was added a fraction VIII, which did not introduce new regulations but new limits on the calculation of PTU, which must be of three months of the worker's salary or the average of the PTU paid during the last three years, whichever is most favorable for the workers.

A critical element for the new calculation of PTU introduced by the reform is the Mixed Commission of Profit Sharing to be in place within companies, which must be made up of an equal number of representatives of the company and representatives of the workers. The company will provide the Commission with the lists of personnel and compensations for the preparation of the profit-sharing project, which must be available for review by workers in the company. Any proposed modifications must be made known to the Commission within fifteen days of the project's publishing.

Profit sharing must be complete within 60 days of the deadline for the submission of the company's annual tax return. Any unclaimed profits in the current year will be added to next year's payment.
worker.

Five key actions for companies

During the transition period kicked off by the outsourcing reform, companies put different strategies in place regarding restructuring and transfer of personnel, which had a direct impact in payment of PTU, especially regarding payment of bonuses, early payment of PTU and others.

Due to this, we advise companies to review appropriate compliance with the following:

- Review the calculation of 2022 PTU considering the new limits set in the Federal Labor Law.
- Analyze the different scenarios available to the company, to identify more efficient payment of PTU.
- Transparency and traceability between the paid and the declared accounting regarding PTU.
- Constitute the Mixed Commission of Profit Sharing.
- Review the classification of trusted workers.

Fines due to non-compliance range 250 to 5000 UMA, amounting to approximately MXN $24,055 and MXN $481,000. The applicable fine will depend on the gravity of the offense and the economic capacity of the breaching company. If non-compliance impacts more than one worker, fines can be applied per affected.
